

Colgate University Names Pamela Prescod-Caesar Associate Vice President for Human Resources

Hamilton, N.Y. – Pamela Prescod-Caesar has been named Colgate University's new Associate Vice President for Human Resources. She will assume her position in September 2008.

Reporting to the Vice President for Finance and Administration, Pam will advise Colgate's President and senior administrators on human resource issues. She will work closely with the university's leadership on benefits, compensation, customer service, leadership management training, support, and management, as well as on the recruitment and retention of a talented and diverse workforce.

"Pam is an effective, thoughtful, and collaborative professional with keen intelligence and a warm personality," said David Hale, Vice President for Finance and Administration at Colgate. "I am confident that she will successfully lead our already strong Human Resources Office in providing important services to the university and all Colgate employees."

For seven years, Pam served in leadership roles at the University Administration Human Resources Office at Harvard University, most recently as Associate Director. Previously, she was Vice President of Human Resources at Morgan Memorial Goodwill Industries in Boston. Over the previous 12-year period, she held a variety of human resources leadership positions with for-profit and not-for-profit organizations, including Boston University Medical Center.

Pam recently completed her Master's in Business Administration at Curry College in Milton, Mass. She received her Bachelor's of Science degree in Business Management from Lesley College.
